WHOLE No. 61.

THE STATE OF EMPLOYMENT IN THE ORGANIZED INDUSTRIES JUNE 30, 1908.

General Summary.

In Labor Bulletin No. 59 for May, 1908, the Bureau gave the results of its first attempt to procure statistics relative to the condition of employment of organized labor, the presentation covering the first quarter ending March 31. The information presented in this article covers a similar canvass for the second quarter ending June 30, 1908, and it is gratifying to be able to state at the outset that complete returns relative to employment were received from 493 organizations as compared with 256¹ organizations thus reporting at the end of the first quarter.

Returns from these 493 trade unions show that on June 30 (the last working day in June), out of 72,815 members reporting, 10,490, or 14.41 per cent, were idle, showing a more favorable state of employment than that on March 31, when out of the 66,968 members reporting, 11,987, or 17.90 per cent, were idle. (See Table III appended.) This increase in employment is undoubtedly due to, and is indicative of, the gradual improvement in business which began in the Spring.

The following table shows that the principle causes of idleness at the end of each quarter were: Slack trade, strikes or lockouts, and disability. The percentage of total union members idle who were idle on account of lack of work decreased from 90.37 per cent in the first quarter to 87.01 per cent in the second quarter; the percentage idle on account of strikes or lockouts decreased from 4.06 per cent to 1.65 per cent; and the percentage idle on account of disability increased from 4.27 per cent to 8.39 per cent.

¹ Following the publication in Labor Bulletin No. 59, May, 1908, of statistics of employment for the end of the first quarter, additional returns were received for that quarter and the original returns were corrected in accordance with the later information received. These corrected returns for the first quarter are used in the comparative tables for the first and second quarters (Tables I and III) presented in this article.

² Including vacations, stock taking, repairs, etc.

The following table shows for the second quarter the number of unions making complete returns, their aggregate membership, and the number and percentage of members idle in the 10 cities from which reports for over 1,000 union members were received.

Table II. — Membership and Idleness, by Localities, June 30, 1908.

Other cities and towns,	181	10,465	1,143	10.92
Totals,	493	72,815	10,490	14.41

Of the 493 unions reporting at the end of the second quarter, 312, having a membership of 62,350, or 85.63 per cent of the total membership reporting, were located in the 10 cities specified; and 181 unions having a membership of 10,465, or 14.37 per cent of the aggregate membership reporting, were located in 158 other cities and towns of the State. The percentage of idleness in Boston, Brockton, Lawrence, Lynn, and New Bedford exceeded the corresponding percentage (14.41) for the State as a whole, Lynn showing the largest percentage idle, namely 19.34 per cent of the membership reporting. In Fall River, Haverhill, Lowell, Springfield, and Worcester the proportion of idleness was less than that of the State as a whole, Springfield showing the smallest percentage idle, namely 5.82 per cent.

Table III appended shows comparatively by general industries the state of employment on the last day of the first and of the second quarters (i.e., March 31 and June 30). The membership of the unions reporting and the percentage idle are given in each case. In preparing this comparative statement it seemed unwise to include the number idle for the reason that the returns do not represent identical unions, although the same system of classification has been observed in the tabulation for each quarter. Referring to that table we find that all of the important industries but two showed a decrease in idleness. In the building trades, 25.20 per cent were idle at the end of March as compared with 18.30 per cent at the end of June. In the textile industry, 43.92 per cent were idle at the end of March as compared with 13.56 per cent idle at the end of June; in transportation the percentages of idleness at the end of March and June were 13.28 and 8.90 respectively; in transportation on railroads the percentages were 6.53 and 5.85; and in tobacco manufacturing, 15.65 and 4.84. The more favorable state of employment which existed at the end of the second quarter is particularly noticeable in the textile industry. The only important instances where there appeared an increase in idleness were in the boot and shoe and iron and steel industries. In the boot and shoe industry the percentage of idleness increased from 8.04 per cent at the end of March to 18.21 per cent at the end of June. In iron and steel manufacturing the percentage of idleness increased from 16.58 per cent to 17.81 per cent.

Table IV appended presents in somewhat fuller detail the returns for the end of the second quarter, showing the number of unions making complete returns, their membership, and the number and percentage idle in the several industries classified by occupations. By reference to that table it will be observed that the largest percentage of idleness at the end of June appeared in the shipbuilding industry, the percentage being 53.28. Other important industries in which large percentages of idleness occurred were: Theatres and music, 49.72 per cent; building and street labor, 43.24 per cent; garments, 42.93 per cent; bookbinding and blankbook making, 41.41 per cent. At the end of March the industries which showed the largest percentages of idleness were: Public employment, 77.58 per cent; paving trades, 65.75 per cent; manufacture of woolen goods, 48.13 per cent; and cotton goods, 43.31 per cent.

MASSACHUSETTS TRADE UNION DIRECTORY FOR 1908.

In this, the seventh annual edition of the Massachusetts Trade Union Directory, the Bureau has endeavored to include every Trade Union within the Commonwealth concerning which information could be obtained. The Directory for 1908 follows in general plan that of 1907 with the exception that instead of three divisions there are now four, the local delegate bodies having been taken from the list of local unions and placed in a separate division for the reason that the character of these organizations differs essentially from the local unions in that they are composed of delegates from the latter.

The number of local unions and local delegate bodies in the Commonwealth according to the 1908 directory is 1,407¹ as compared with 1,467 in 1907, 1,417 in 1906, 1,333 in 1905, and 1,444 in 1904. In the 1908 directory there will be found 152 unions which were not in the 1907 edition, and there were 212 unions in the 1907 directory which will not be found in the 1908 edition; thus there appears a net decrease of 60 unions. This apparent decrease is to be attributed partly to the more thorough revision of the directory during the present year made possible by a quarterly instead of annual canvass, and partly to the industrial depression of the past year, during which period a large number of local unions either disbanded or combined with other organizations.

Of the 1,407 local unions and local delegate bodies included in the 1908 directory, 284 have their headquarters in the city of Boston, 69 in Worcester, 63 in Springfield, 57 in Lawrence, 55 in Brockton, 51 in Lowell, 51 in Lynn, 41 in Holyoke, 39 in Fall River, 37 in New Bedford, 34 in Fitchburg, and 31 in Haverhill. These 12 cities are credited with 812 organizations, or 57.71 per cent of the whole number in the State. The remaining 595 unions are distributed among 118 cities and towns.

A classification by industries and occupations of the 1,330 local unions (not including local delegate bodies) appearing in the 1908 directory shows that the building and stone working industry is represented by far the largest number of unions, there being 422 under this caption of which 338 are building trades unions, 41 are unions of granite cutters, quarry workers, and other stone workers, 37 are unions of building laborers, and six are unions of pavers. The 338 building trades unions include 127 carpenters unions; 63 unions of painters, decorators, and paperhangers; 56 unions of bricklayers, masons, and plasterers; 38 unions of plumbers, steamfitters, and gasfitters; 16 unions of electrical workers; 13 unions of lathers; 11 unions of sheet metal workers; and 14 other building trades unions.

In numerical importance organizations of transportation employees follow those of employees engaged in building and stone working trades, being represented by 195 unions distributed as follows: Steam railroad employees, 105; teamsters and drivers, 42; street and electric railway employees, 23; freight handlers and longshoremen, 14; other unions, 11. Metals, machinery, and shipbuilding constitutes the third group, being represented by 148 unions distributed as follows: Machinists, 27; iron molders, 25; metal polishers, 17; boiler makers, 15; horseshoers, 15; other unions, 49. Then follow in numerical importance the following groups of industries: Clothing manufacture, 119 unions (including boot and shoe workers, 79; garment workers and tailors, 26; other unions, 14); restaurants and retail trade, 66 unions (including bartenders, 30; retail clerks, 26; other unions, 10); textiles, 64 unions (including cotton goods, 48; woolen goods, nine; other textiles, seven); food, liquors, and tobacco, 53 unions (including brewery workers and drivers, 17; cigar makers, 16; bakers, 14; other unions, six); printing and allied trades, 48 unions (including compositors, 17; printing pressmen, 12; other unions, 19); public employment, 38 unions; woodworking and furniture, 31 unions; leather and rubber goods, nine unions; paper and paper goods, six unions; miscellaneous occupations, 131 unions (including barbers, 29; musicians, 26; stationary engineers, 26; stationary firemen, 19; theatrical stage employees, 15; and other unions, 16).

[NOTE. The Directory is divided into four parts: (1) "National and International Organizations" which have affiliated local unions in Massachusetts; (2) "State and District Organizations," or unions, councils, and lodges not confined to one city or town, but embracing a section of the State, or several States; (3) "Local Delegate Organizations," composed of delegates from local unions in the same locality; (4) "Local Organizations."

In addresses the word "street" has been omitted; other designations are abbreviated as follows: Av. for avenue; Pl., place; Ter., terrace; Pk., park; Rd., road; L. B., lock box.

Other abbreviations: C. L. U. for Central Labor Union; B. and S. W., Boot and Shoe Workers; S. W. P., Shoe Workers Protective; K. of L., Knights of Labor; I. W. W., Industrial Workers of the World. The following abbreviations refer to the halls in which the unions meet or have their headquarters; K. of C., Knights of Columbus; K. of M., Knights of Malta; K. of P., Knights of Pythias; A. O. 4. LOCAL ORGANIZATIONS.

[The following presentation gives the names of the local organizations arranged alphabetically by cities and towns. Some of the local unions are affiliated with national federations, and others are entirely independent of any other labor body. The names of the local delegate bodies, such as central labor unions, trades councils, and district councils, are given in Division 3 of the directory immediately preceding this division. In every case where the information could be obtained the following facts are given for each union: Name of union, place of meeting, telephone number, time of meeting, name and address of recording secretary, name and address of business agent, or, lacking these addresses, the name or address of some other officer authorized to conduct correspondence for the local. Where a special address is not given for a business agent or secretary, he may be addressed at the place of meeting. When the hall and location were returned as the place of meeting, the street and number only have been recorded.]
